

The same is true with the B-2 bomber. If we do nothing on the B-2 bomber, if we go along with the Dellums-Kasich amendment, then we are sticking our head in the sand. By the year 2010, the B-52 heavy bombers that we have protecting this country will be over 50 years old.

We cannot sit back and do nothing anymore. We have to plan for the 21st century, not only in Medicare but also in protecting the shores and senior citizens and the young and the old alike.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all my colleagues to oppose the Dellums-Kasich amendment and support the B-2 bomber.

BIPARTISAN EFFORT IS NEEDED TO ADDRESS QUESTIONS OF ETHICS

(Mr. DOGGETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, to resolve so many of the problems of this country, it is essential that Republicans and Democrats come together in a bipartisan fashion. We have seen in this session how this can work.

We have seen a 50-year-old lobbying law adjusted. We have seen a gift ban rule to ban gifts to Members of the Senate approved. And yesterday in a dramatic action, we saw Republicans join Democrats to actually vote to expel a Member.

But for some reason there is a line down the rotunda, and none of that bipartisanship is happening on this side of the Capitol. At the same time that action was being taken, this body was rejecting, on a party line basis, doing anything about gifts for Members of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, today also is the first anniversary, 1 year ago a complaint concerning GOPAC and the Speaker was made to the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct and we have done nothing but dillydallied.

It is time our Republican Members joined us and put a hand on the broom to sweep clean the questions of integrity concerning this House.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOBSON). It should be noted that Members should not refer to disciplinary actions in either House.

RESTORING HOPE AND OPPORTUNITY

(Mr. KNOLLENBERG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, the Republican majority has been diligently working to keep our promises to the American people. This fall we will complete work on our balanced budget plan, save Medicare from bankruptcy, and allow working families and businesses to keep more of what they earn.

For too long, Washington's solution to America's problems was always new spending and new taxes. As a result, our national debt now exceeds $4.9 trillion and the average American family pays more in taxes than it spends on clothing, food, and shelter combined.

This fall offers our best chance to honestly balance the budget, cut exorbitant taxes, and ensure that our children have a bright future that is free of debt and full of hope.

The choices are simple we can either spend now and worry later or we can move forward with an agenda that forces the Federal Government to live within its means, saves the American dream for our children, and lays the foundation for a generation of economic growth and prosperity.

Mr. Speaker, there are no legitimate excuses for continuing to spend money that we do not have. It is time for Congress to quit avoiding the tough choices and restore some sanity to the Federal budget.

AMERICA NEEDS THE B-2 BOMBER

(Mr. TORRES asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TORRES. Mr. Speaker, the current debate over the B-2 bomber marks a turning point for the preservation of U.S. air power. It has been said that the history of U.S. military power is characterized by technological achievements that produced globally dominating weapons systems. I would maintain that the B-2 bomber is just such a technological achievement. If we examine the core competencies of each of our branch of services, it would be evident that independent strategic bombardment has clearly become the unique core competency of our new U.S. Air Force. Indeed, the United States is no longer just a maritime power—we are an aerospace power, and this strategic air power is vital to our national security.

The President of this United States must continue to have the leverage to deter an aggressor by threatening to destroy most of its economic infrastructure with an immediate, devastating strike. If such a strike were necessary, it could be done with B-2's with minimum support, minimum risk, minimum collateral damage, and without U.S. ground force fatalities.

The B-2 has global range, high subsonic speed and an extremely low radar signature. It combines the most modern avionics with the ability to deliver precision weapons in all weather conditions. Having created this devastating capability I would urge my colleagues not to abandon it without truly understanding the facts. We must project our legacy in air power into the future—to do this we need the B-2 bomber.

MEDICARE IS GOING BROKE

(Mr. BURR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURR. Mr. Speaker, Medicare is going broke. Not maybe. Not way down the road. If this Congress does not address this crisis, our Medicare system will be out of money by the year 2002.

This is not an issue for partisan bickering. This is not an issue where business-as-usual is appropriate. The pending insolvency of Medicare threatens the availability of health care to more than 32 million of America's senior citizens.

The Medicare crisis was defined in April by the Medicare Board of Trustees—including Secretaries Reich, Shalala, and Rubin. In their report on the status of the Medicare Program, they indicate that "the Medicare program is clearly unsustainable in its present form" and they "strongly recommend that the crisis presented by the financial condition of the Medicare trust funds be urgently addressed."

Mr. Speaker, we owe it to our senior citizens to face this Medicare crisis head on. It is the responsibility of Congress to fulfill our commitment to this country's seniors and initiate Medicare reform making this program financially sound now and in the years to come.

THE CRUEL HOAX OF MEDICARE'S INSOLVENCY

(Mr. PALLONE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I rise simply to correct this terrible hoax that the Republicans are playing on the American people, that somehow the Medicare Program is bankrupt or insolvent.

In fact, the trustee's report that came out this year showed dramatically that Medicare has never had more money available and, in fact, the life of the program is at least 7 years beyond this year. That is a longer period of time before Medicare goes insolvent than any other period of time that the trustees have reported on in the last few years.

The fact of the matter is that we cannot keep this Medicare Program with a huge pot of money, because if we did that, providers and others would want to raid the program to take advantage of that pot of money. Congress has historically kept the amount of money simply for a few years going in order to protect the program, and it is a cruel hoax on the American people to suggest that Medicare is going insolvent.

What the Republicans are doing is raiding the Medicare trust fund in order to finance a tax cut. It is that simply. They do not want to tell the truth about what is happening here. It is a huge tax cut for the richest Americans.
